Mrs. Langtry Will Appear.

The coming of Mrs. Langtry to the Na-Honal next Monday, in that famous comedy, "The Degenerates," will no doubt mean the capacity of the theater. The play and star have created a genuine sensation this season, and the desire to see Mrs. Langtry season, and the desire to see Mrs. Langtry and her much-talked-of gowns is not greater than to hear Sydney Grundy's description and expose of the doings of London's fast social set. The production to be seen here will be the same as that shown during the long run in London, and it is said to be one of the heaviest ever brought across the Atlantic for a single pair.

-Growth of the Fund.

Features continue to be added to the already notable list of attractions which will characterize the gathering of the Nobles of the Mystic Shrine, who will assemble here in May in their annual conclave which attends the session of the Imperial Counell of the order. A large appropriation was made some time ago to provide for a grand illumination of Pennsylvania avenue from the Peace monument to 17th street and for displays of aerial fireworks and set pieces at the west front of the Capitol, the south front of the treasury and at 17th street and Pennsylvania avenue. The sum of $1,000 has been added to this, and this the decorations committee will expend for novel special features which will mark a new departure in pyrotéchnics.

Fund Steadily Increasing.

The substantial part of the event is being well taken care of by the finance committee, which was organized to secure the sum of $50,000 as an entertainment fund. Over a fifth of this amount has been already contributed and many large pledges have contributed and many large piedges have not been included. The subscriptions so far announced are as follows:

SAWDUST, SPANGLES AND TIGHTS.

Immense Crowds Saw the Mimic Splendors of the Circus Yesterday. The circus is a Christmas-like occurrence in its yearly visitation, and brings almost as much joy to the infantile heart as the coming of Santa Claus. Only the circus as a far more reaching local effect than Christmas in that it fires the interest and enthusiasm in grown-up children who have long since been lost to the pretty Christmastide myth. Washington shares with the other American cities the disposition to 'turn itself loose' when the circus comes to own, and for the nonce all other subjects pale into insignificance. The big Forepaugh and Sells Brothers' show attracted two immense audiences yesterday, the many rows of seats stretching fround the great arena of savidust and tinsel being banked with humanity at both afternoon and evening performances. So great was the crowd in the evening that the reserved seat section was soon sold out and many persons were unable to gain entrance to the general ad-

Like all circus crowds the vast throngs Lake all circus crowds the vast throngs gathered without and within the tents of the show yesterday were happy, without care, and bent upon enjoying themselves. Unlike most circuses, however, the one in the city at present fully met all expectations, and far from being disappointed, the thousands who poured from the exit after the conclusion of the main exhibition were still in joyous mood, for they had been entertained in great style. The order of the District Commissioners prohibiting the heastill in joyous mood, it. The order of the tertained in great style. The order of the District Commissioners prohibiting the peadors and other trict Commissioners prohibiting the pea-t, pigs' feet, clam vendors and other rietles of moving merchants from embling about the circus, left the reantile field without the great tents full possession of the regular ders traveling with the show. The esult was a magnificent success so far as refer was concerned, but an interesting eature of "circus night" was lost. The ide show, with its stretch of freak-pletured envas in front and queer humanity within ild a thriving business throughout the day. In some cases the song of the barker was In some cases the song of the barker was weirdly unique. Outside a tent of dirty gray were two men in oriental costumes—one beating a tom-tom with his fist and the other played a flageolet. The men at the ticket stand motioned the oriental musiclans to ccase and then addressed the wondering crowd; "You see before you 'the black tent.' We call it 'the black tent' because the canvas of which it is made is black. Inside you will find the horrors of war. Remember, we do not show you pictures, but men cut down before your eyes, armies destroyed and battleships blown to pieces!"

The side show canvases were gaudy and alluring, but none of the others offered quite so strong an appeal to horror-loving humanity.

"And now, ladies and gentlemen," said
the ringmaster, "we will open the show with a 'grand, sumptuous and titanic spectacular, zoological, hippodramatic cif-land and equine inaugural pageant and arenic carnival upon the great outer circle and in the three arenas. A superb, sensational and stupendous eye feast, and majestic ani-mated and iridescent illustration of the holiday resources of this renowned aggre-gation."

with this announcement the old circus goers felt really at home. They had passed through the menagerie; fed the huge elephants with peanuts; enjoyed the sight of the two little baby lions just twenty days old, being coddled by their mother; had gone the round of the zoo and explained it all to the juvenile members of the party for whose sake the circus was visited, and had then settled down on the bauches to had then settled down on the benches to let the children see the show. There were thousands and thousands of There were thousands and thousands of people under the great canvas. There were three immense rings and two stages and around them the multitude was benched, tier after tier of faces rising up to the eaves of the canvas roof. Overhead the rings was a maze of tight-ropes and trapezes, upon which a dozen men and women swung at a time, making the head of the beholder dizzy as the eye tried to take in all their evolutions at once. Horses and bareback riders in the rings; trapezists in midair; jugglers on the stages, clowns everywhere and the circus band keeping up a merry din all the while. Thus for two hours and more the Forepaugh & Sells united shows entertained the vast throng with all the stock pieces of the old-time circus and with a variety of novelties as well.

One of the most interesting features of the show was the performance of a school of trained seals and sealions. These clumsy animals were made to do things with almost human intelligence, and seemed to take a real delight in their feats of juggling and other tricks, which drew exclamations of wonder and delight from the eudience. A group of trained elephants that danced the lancers also pleased the onlookers. There were a score of unique features, some never before shown in Washington. Among the feats of daring in the air was an exhibition of bicycle riding on a tight rope, and no less entertaining was the blcycle riding of two little tots of humanity on the stage.

The equestrian exhibition was unusually elaborate and attractive. Some noble specimens of horseffesh were shown, and the riding, driving and racing aroused the audience to a high pitch of enthusiasm. The young folks were delighted by the antics of a large corps of clowns and the inevitable trick donkey was in evidence.

Another performance will be given tonight at 8 o'clock, closing the show's visit to Washington. One of the most interesting features of

SUICIDE OF JOHN STREIF

SIGNAL CORPS PREVAME HANGS HIM. SELF IN VIRGINIA WOODS.

Dead Body Accidentally Discovered by Colored Man-Streif Served

John Streif, a private in Company B of the Fort Myer signal corps, committed sui cide several days ago by hanging. His body was discovered hanging to a limb of a tree yesterday afternoon in Dorsey's woods by a colored man who was wandering through the place. It was cut down and later removed to the vault at Arlington national cemetery. An inquest was held this morning, and all the evidence submitted indicated a premeditated death.

The man had been missing from his post for eleven days, and from all the circumstances developed the body had been hang ing where it was found for nearly that length of time. Streif had used a rope made from pieces of the lining of his over-coat securely tied together. His head was only a short distance from the limb and the feet a few inches from the ground. It is believed the man climbed the tree, tied one end of the improvised rope around the limb, fastened the other about his neck and then let himself fall, death evidently and then let himself fall, death evidently being due to strangulation.

The place selected for the suicide was near Rosslyn, some distance from the road leading to Falls Church. The spot is seldom visited by anybody. There is no one who can be found who saw the soldier enter the woods, and the discovery was made by accident, the colored man mentioned being in search of wild herbs and flowers at the time. He immediately notified the village authorities of Rosslyn. Magistrate Smith gave permission to a detachment of men from Fort Myer to take charge of the remains and remove them to Arlington.

Rated as Beauter.

Rated as Deserter.

Streif had not been seen since he left his post by any of his comrades. Tuesday the charge of desertion was entered against his name. He was a native of Switzerland and thirty-six years of age. He formerly belonged to the 6th United States Cavalry American war joined the 4th United States Immunes. At the expiration of his term of immunes. At the expiration of his term of enlistment he joined the signal corps, about nine months ago. The man was addicted to strong drink and was frequently reprimanded. Just before he left the post he was on a spree. It is supposed that in a fit of remorse he took his own life, fearing possibly a severe punishment from his superior officers.

CONSIDERATION URGED.

At a meeting of the committee on chari ties and corrections of the board of trade yesterday afternoon a resolution was adopted recommending "to the appropriate committees of Congress the immediate consideration of plans on the part of the De-partment of Justice and also of the Commissioners of the District of Columbia looking toward the removal at the earliest possible day from their present sites, respec tively, of the District jail and Washington Asylum, including the almshouse, workhouse and the asylum hospital, with their present adjuncts of the smallpox hospital and the potter's field."

and the potter's field."

The resolution further "recommends to the authorities of the District of Columbia that in order to have the occupation of the present site terminate at the earliest day possible, the erection of temporary frame structures for the Washington Asylum be decided upon instead of expensive structures of brick, as now proposed."

A young colored woman named Lucy Johns, who lives in the disreputable section of the city, concluded yesterday that she wanted to die. She took a big dose of tincture of iodine, but before she became very sick she changed her mind. Then she went to the Emergency Hospital and had Dr. Williams relieve her of the drug. She was soon out of danger, and was able to return home.
